That in accordance with Section 115 of the Election Law of 1905 a county convention of the Democratic party shall be held in Brazos County on August 4, 1906, at the county court house, and shall be composed of one delegate from each precinct in this county for each twenty-five votes or a majority fraction thereof cast for the democratic candidate for Governor at the general election in 1904. Such delegates shall be elected by the voters of each precinct on primary election day by ballot, which ballot shall be received by the officers of the election and deposited in a separate box used for that purpose and not in the box in which are placed the ballots for other candidates.

2. The delegates shall be voted for by each voter after he has cast the official ballot, and the ballots for delegates shall be identified by the initials of the presiding officer and numbered as in the case of the official ballot, and shall be counted, tallied and returns made as prescribed for the official primary ballot, and the box shall be sealed and returned at the same time and in the same manner as the other ballot boxes, and the votes shall be canvassed and the results announced with the other returns.

3. This committee will furnish the ballots to be used in voting for delegates provided the candidates file their applications or notices with the county chairman at or before 12 o'clock noon, July 9, 1906, accompanying each of the applications with a fee of 50c for each candidate, which fee shall be used to pay for printing the ballots for the delegates. The names of all candidates for delegates in each precinct shall be placed on one ballot, and the voter shall erase those he does not desire to vote for, reducing the number to not more than the number of delegates allowed each precinct. Candidates polling largest vote shall be declared elected, until required number of delegates shall have been elected for respective precincts.

5. Any person desiring to be a candidate for delegate must comply with this resolution or his name will not be printed on the ballot.

6. These ballots will be handed to voters after they have voted the official ballot, and if there are no ballots provided with the printed names of delegates, then the voter may prepare his own ballot. All ballots cast not in accordance with this resolution shall not be counted.

OUT OF FUNDS.

Cash to the Credit of General Revenue Account Exhausted.

Austin, June 18.—The state of Texas is again "busted." The funds in the state treasury to the credit of the general revenue account became exhausted Monday and from now on the state will have to be conducted on a credit basis. As soon as it became known that the funds were exhausted there was a rush on treasury by persons holding warrants, who wanted to be among the first to register their warrants, and within a few hours nearly 200 warrants had been registered. State Treasurer Robbins estimates that it will be next year before the state again goes on a cash basis, as all taxes for the 1905 have been turned in by tax collectors. It now looks as if the members of the next legislature will have to work on credit and take their chances in getting their mileage and per diem during the beginning of next session. The state went on a cash basis March 1 last.

BUNKER HILL BATTLE.

Boston Celebrates One Hundred and Thirty-First Anniversary.

Boston, June 18.—Accompanied by the roar of guns, snapping of firecrackers and ringing of bells the celebration of the one hundred and thirty-first anniversary of the battle of Bunker Hill, always a legal holiday, began at midnight Sunday night. At that hour Mayor Fitzgerald lighted an immense bonfire on the Charlestown grounds. At 7 o'clock Monday morning the city officials and invited guests sailed down Boston harbor to meet the king of the carnival and escort him to the landing at the navy yard. The parade, under the auspices of the June Carnival association, and consisting principally of allegorical floats, followed. The United Irish societies had an independent procession.

St. Paul Is Visited by Most Astronomical Conflagration.

ANNEX IS TOTAL LOSS

Six-Story Structure Was Completely Guttled and Number of Firemen Injured by Flying Glass or Overcome by Smoke.

St. Paul, June 18.—The six-story Annex building was completely gutted by a fire which was discovered shortly after 8 o'clock Sunday morning, and which burned fiercely all day. The estimated damage to building and stocks is between $450,000 and $500,000.

The fire originated in the basement of the store occupied by the Palace Clothing company, supposedly from a defective electric wire. It had gained great headway when the fire department reached the building, but probably would have been confined to the basement but for the fact that a series of gas explosions prevented the firemen from getting at the flames, and caused the flames to spread throughout the entire structure.

Several firemen were badly cut by flying pieces of glass, and thirty-seven were overcome by heat and smoke. Ten of these were taken to the hospital and the rest to their homes. All will recover with the possible exception of W. A. Edwards, who is reported in a critical condition.

MAJORITY RESUME.

Revolt in the Indian Territory—Arkansas District Is Threatened.

Kansas City, June 18.—A majority of the soft coal mines which shut down April 1 in Missouri, Kansas, Indian Territory and Arkansas resumed operations Monday morning as far as heard from in compliance with the Kansas City contract recently signed by the officers of the United Mine Workers of America and the Southwestern Coal Operators' association.

A revolt in one district (No. 21), composed of Indian Territory and Arkansas is threatened, however, and representatives of eight local unions in the neighborhood of Hartford, Ark., may continue the strike.

These representatives assert the Kansas City conference attempted to violate the laws of the state of Arkansas that were passed at the request of the miners and in the interest of mine workers. They say if the miners enter into an unlawful agreement with operators they will never expect further legislation in their favor.

The union agreed to call for a convention to be held at Fort Smith, June 25, to form a new and independent district, withdrawing from District No. 21 entirely, but not from the United Mine Workers. They agreed also at the meeting last week to resolutions declaring the strike still exists.

NOTHING HEARD.

Authorities Seemingly Refuse to Permit Sending of News.

St. Petersburg, June 18.—No fresh news had been received from Bialystok Monday morning and the noon newspapers got no word directly from correspondents there. A correspondent of the Associated Press, who should have arrived there from St. Petersburg Sunday morning, had not been heard from up to noon Monday. Nothing was received here from the parliamentary commission sent to Bialystok to inquire into and report upon the massacre of the Jews. It is evident the authorities will not allow any dispatches to be sent from the terror-stricken town, which is regarded as proof of the horror of the situation. The last telegram known to have been received here reached M. Ostogoraki, a member of the lower house of parliament, Sunday. It said: "Jewish outrage at Bialystok was produced by provocation. Police participated in it, and troops actively supported the rioters. Military authorities now have full control. The governor general left the city. Persons who tried to leave Bialystok were killed at the railroad station, and others who succeeded in reaching the open fields outside the town were run down by dragoons. There seems no hope of stopping the attacks. The number of victims is large. While this appeal for immediate assistance is being written we hear about us the sound of volleys."

AUTHORIZES AMENDING.

Meat Inspection Bill Will Nearer Meet President's Views.

Washington, June 18.—The house committee on agriculture has authorized Chairman Wadsworth and Representative Brooks of Colorado to amend the meat inspection provision in the agricultural bill to meet the views of President Roosevelt, after which the measure will be submitted to the president by Speaker Cannon. It is stated that not all the presidential suggestions will be accepted if the wishes of the committee are complied with. Discussion Monday made it plain that there was no objection to eliminating the court review provision, as suggested by the president; also his wishes that the civil service commission furnish inspectors will be complied with. There is opposition to placing the date of manufacture on the label and to inserting the words: "In the judgment of the secretary of agriculture," thus making the secretary the final authority regarding the measure.

There was some criticism by members of the committee to the method to be employed in handling the measure, as no Republican members who presented the minority views nor any Democratic members of the committee are to have anything to do with redrafting the substitute.

TWO HUNDRED DEAD.

Invasion of Guatemala From Salvador Was Repulsed.

New York, June 18.—A special cable dispatch to the Herald from Panama says: The Herald's correspondent in Guatemala cables that General Lopez, from Salvador, invaded Guatemala near the Pacific coast with 2,000 men, mostly Salvadoreans, but partly Guatemalan rebels. They met a superior Guatemalan force and retreated into Salvador after a short action.

The rebels' invasion from the Mexicans side near Autlan was a disastrous failure, 200 being killed or drowned in seeking to recross the frontier river. The rebellion has been crushed on both frontiers.

The rebels are watching for another raid from Salvador, but there is no chance of success. The American government is trying to compel the Salvador government to stop aiding the rebels covertly.

MANY MUTILATED.

Nearly Three Hundred Jewish Corpses Were Terribly Treated.

Odessa, June 18.—The Novosti, of this city, published a dispatch from the correspondent at Bialystok saying: "I personally counted 290 Jewish corpses, a great number of which were horribly mutilated. Only six Christians were killed and eight wounded."

FORD'S SALOON

ON LETTER WRITING

SOME ADVICE TO SCHOOLGIRLS ON THE SUBJECT.

Don't Write a Letter When in a Hurry—Girls Should Have Few Young Men Correspondents—Any Handwriting a Failure That Is Difficult to Read—Stilted High Flown Letters Out of Date—Letters Among the Most Indestructible of Earthly Possessions.

BY MARGARET E. SANGSTER.
I heard Louise declare the other day that she hated to write a letter, and that she put off the unwelcome task as long as she could. Nellie with whom she was talking agreed that writing letters was a bore, but added that for her part she dearly loved to receive them. Well, most of us do. When the postman comes in the morning, it is a pleasure to find that he has brought you a letter from the girl who visited you last summer, or your cousin at Yale, or your favorite uncle whose letters are a little old-fashioned, but who at Christmas, Easter, and birthdays, proves himself a generous friend.

One always feels satisfaction at being remembered by the absent. If one is away from home, the mails are eagerly watched for letters from father and mother, and the rest of the dear home group. It is wonderful how fast and how safe are the trains that carry the letters with the little red stamp affixed, to show that Uncle Sam is responsible for their rapid transit. Only a thin slip of paper and a little gum protect it from the world, but the letter with its story of home-life, its check from papa, its little love gift from mamma, goes flying from New York to South Dakota, or from Boston to San Francisco, or New Orleans to Narragansett Bay, passing from hand to hand, until it reaches its destination. Nothing so slight as a letter seems to me so strong and so entirely protected from risks and dangers.

I do not think girls would dislike to write letters if they observed two or three rules. One is not to write a letter in too great a hurry. If you are on tip toe to go down the street, with Jean, or have made an engagement to skate with your brother and his chum at four o'clock, you will hardly be able to write a creditable letter, if you give yourself only five minutes to do it in. A girl needs a sense of leisure and a spare half hour in which to write the letter that shall carry something of her real self to her distant friend, or her anxious mother, miles away. No compliment is conveyed by frantic haste. Decide what you can do and what you can omit and get a little clear space and unhurried time before you begin a letter. Next, always answer a letter as soon as you can after you have read it. It is then fresh in your mind, the questions it asks and the news it conveys are alike full of interest to you, and you can carry on your part of the written conversation without its being one-sided and indifferent.

"I have a letter from Ruth," complained Ruth's sister, Rose, "and she has not told me a single thing I wanted to know, nor given me the address of her music teacher, nor so much as enquired how grandmother is and grandmother will be sure to ask me to read her the letter."

In this case Ruth's letter was a disappointment. A good plan before one begins is to glance again at the letter received and note the particular points that should not be overlooked in the reply.

A third suggestion concerns one's correspondents. A school girl ought not to engage in letter writing about which her parents and friends are in the dark. For instance, Adeline consulted me the other day about the propriety of corresponding with a boy whom she casually met at her Cousin D's, when spending a day there, last summer. "He seemed a very nice boy," she said, "and I liked him very much. Now he is at the university and has written to me and wishes me to write to him. What shall I do?"

The thing for Adeline or any other girl to do in this instance is to show her boy friend's letter to her mother or teacher, and be guided by the advice given her. My own would be simply to answer such a letter very politely, but to explain that I was too busy to engage in a correspondence. A girl's letters to boys should be limited to members of her own family, to the cousinhood, and perhaps to somebody whom she has known all her life. When you meet a person accidentally and only for a short time, you do not know him well enough to write to him or receive his letters.

A fourth bit of counsel concerns itself with the dress of a letter. I do hope you girls write a legible hand. Whatever else handwriting may be, it is a failure if it is difficult to read. Such little things as correct spelling and punctuation are very important. Misspelled words are as unsightly as ink spots, and dashes do not take the place of commas and periods. Write plainly, spell correctly. A good quality of note paper and black ink are indispensable in the correspondence of a young lady. Every letter should have at the top the full postoffice address of the writer and the date of the writing. Many people date their letters at the end, a fashion that has little to commend it, and which should be changed as soon as possible by us all for the more intelligent manner of dating what we write at the top of the first page. Do not write in a haphazard way all over your paper, so that it is as bad as solving a puzzle to find out where the next page begins. Sign your letter with your full name, no matter to whom you are writing.

Never write a letter to anyone which would give you uneasiness or disturbance should it fall into the wrong hand. Write as you talk, the more naturally the better. Stilted, high-flown letters are not welcome anywhere. In old times people began a letter by saying, "I take my pen in hand to write you a few lines, hoping that they will find you in good health, as I am now."

Sometimes they were even more formal than this. When I was fourteen I received a letter which began in this way: "Respected Miss." Nobody would think of starting a letter in that fashion to-day, and taking one's pen in hand and the allusion to a few lines has quite gone out. Write naturally as if your friend were in the room with you, and you were cozily chatting with her. It is proper to address a stranger as "My dear Mrs. C.," and not as "Dear Mrs. C." The personal pronoun adds a touch of ceremony. "Dearest" is to be reserved for those to whom it applies, mother or sister, or the chum who is your very confidential friend, and almost your other self.

If you are obliged to write a business letter, address the firm or the person by name, following it on another line with Dear Sirs, or "Dear Sir," or "Madam."

First, last and all the time, regard a letter as a thing with which pains should be taken. Long years hence the letter a girl writes may come back to her out of the past for, strangely enough, letters are among the most indestructible of earthly possessions. (Copyright, 1906, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

NEGRO OYSTER TONGSMEN

Hardy Colored Men Who Rake Up the Succulent Bivalves for Market.

Of all the men who derive a livelihood from the waters of the Chesapeake bay and its tributaries there is no harder specimen than the colored tongsmen. From the first day of the oyster season until its close in the late spring he grapples in the mud with his tongs and brings up the succulent bivalves and drops them in the yawning hold of his skipjack or bugeye, as the craft may be. The tongsmen are an early riser in the oyster months. Long before the sun peeps over the cold gray waters of the bay he is out on the oyster beds working the slippery tongs, while his clothing and boots are frozen on him. The chilling wind cuts his cheeks and the floating ice crunches against the sides of his craft, but he only stamps and sings a peculiar chantlike hymn and works swifter than ever. When the big bay packets glide by, with their anchors and rails coated with ice, the tongsmen stops long enough from his labors to wave his hat at the passengers peering through the windows of the well-heated saloon. They take a long look at his bare hands and the ice glistening on his coat and boots and shiver.

"He'll freeze to death out in an open boat such weather as this," is the comment. But the colored tongsmen does not freeze. Long winters on the bay since he was tall enough to handle the tongs have made him almost immune to the cold.

"Cold?" he echoes when you question him. "Oh, no; Ah isn't cold. Why, dis heah am spring weddah 'longside of some Ah'b tongs in. Why, Ah'b tongs oystahs out heah in de bay when dey froze togedder soon es you lifted dem frum de watah. Oh, no; dis ain't cold."

And the hardy tongsmen laughs when you point at the ice on his person. It is in the oyster season that we hear so much about "shanghaiing" on the Chesapeake bay. This is an unlawful system of luring men from northern cities down to Baltimore to work on the dredgeboats. Once aboard these boats, the victims are at the mercy of the brutal captains, who force them to work the dredges until they are too weak, from the lack of proper food, to stand up, and then they are dumped on some barren shore or island, penniless and often frostbitten.

But the colored tongsmen experiences none of these hardships. He is his own master. He owns his skipjack or bugeye, and when the hold is filled with the fruits of his tongs he sails up to the "buy boat" or to one of the oyster wharves and exchanges the cargo of bivalves for cash. Then he goes ashore and buys his bacon and a bag of flour and returns to his little craft and cooks his meals on the tiny stove on deck. Supper over, he retires to his little cabin and sleeps until the first streak of gray appears on the eastern skies, and then he hoists sail and glides out to the oyster beds to begin another day's tonging.

Dangerous Place.
Judge Brewer is responsible for the following: "An amusing thing took place in Washington in connection with the supreme court last winter. There was a young man in the courtroom who was talking out loud, making a little confusion, and one of the old colored bailiffs went in and led him out and said: 'Young man, you want to come out and be still. That is the supreme court of the United States in there! If they get after you nobody in the world could help you out! Nobody could help you—except the Almighty—and the chances are He won't interfere!'"

A WIFE TO ORDER.

BY LOUIS D. LANGE.

(Copyright, 1906, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

William Beattie was a lonesome man even as he had been a lonesome boy. All through his lonesome youth he had the most ardent feelings toward the girls with whom he came in contact, but something in his retiring nature forbade him to express these feelings or to get on even friendly terms with the objects of his admiration and desire.

In the meantime he was most faithful and efficient in business and prospered accordingly. At 30 he found himself comparatively a rich man, with boundless prospects before him. But he was not satisfied. Far from it, he was restless, morose—savagely angry with his fate.

"What boots it that I have success, money, the respect and fear of men," he said to himself, "when I cannot have the love of woman—the one great thing I have wanted all my life?"

"You have not tried," replied his inner self, relentlessly.

"I cannot," he responded, savagely. "Nature left some void in my makeup, and try as I will, I am tongue-tied in the presence of women."

William Beattie, however, realized thoroughly the value of wealth, of hard cash. He knew its power over men and women, and in his business dealings he never made any mistakes in dealing with women any more than he did with men. It was only when he attempted to put himself into personal relations with women that he became tongue-tied and impotent.

Finally at 30 he made a great resolve.

"I can never win a woman's love—that is clear," he said to himself, "and a woman's love is the only thing in all the world that I want. I have achieved business means. I have all the money I will ever need—and plenty more coming. Nothing can stop that. I have never failed in a single enterprise to which I gave my mind and energy. Why not give this same mind and energy to secure what I want more than all else—a woman's love. To feel soft arms about my neck, to have languid eyes look into mine, to have a clinging, yielding form in my arms. To have children clamoring about my knees—for all this I would work harder, sacrifice more, than I have ever done. In fact I would give all I have acquired and all I hope to acquire."

"Why don't you do something about it?" inquired his inner self, relentlessly.

"I am going to," he replied, sharply. "I am going to devote all my energy and brains hereafter to securing a woman to complete my life. Since I cannot win a woman, I will start out at the beginning and rear one for my own purposes. I will buy a baby girl, and have her reared and educated for the express purpose of becoming my wife."

And with this determination he started out. He haunted orphan asylums and lying-in hospitals. He sought the poor districts, where children are, of necessity, a burden. It was long before he found what he wanted, but eventually he did find it.

It was in St. Anthony's orphan asylum—and the face of the little girl—a child of five or six—attracted and thrilled him. Her dark, passionate eyes, her olive skin, her jet-black hair, her lithe young figure—all gave promise of glorious womanhood.

Inquiry developed that she was the daughter of a poor Italian girl of marvelous beauty, who had been brought to the lying-in hospital across the way by a big-hearted stranger, with plenty of money, and an air which bespoke blue blood. He had paid all her expenses liberally in advance, and then had faded away and was heard of no more.

After her recovery, the young mother, being unable to take care of the child, had placed it in the orphan asylum across the way. Beattie eagerly sought the mother. Though worn by years of coarsening toil, and still more coarsening associations, she still retained a remnant of a passionate type of beauty which put Beattie's nerves on edge and made his pulses bound. Not at all intellectual was Anita Mat-foli, not educated or refined or intellectual, but she possessed all the splendid latin possibilities of love—and showed it in every motion.

"If she were 16 instead of 30, and fresh instead of being a worn-out wreck, and young and pliable and tractable, I would marry her to-day and defy the world."

He heard her pitiful story—the old story of a pretty and voluptuous young Italian girl, a debonaire man of the world—and a child, without a name. Who the handsome stranger was who flashed across her orbit for a brief moment, and then passed on, she had no sort of conception, except that he was a gentleman, and that his dalliance by the wayside with her was a distinct concession on his part, and a cause for pride on hers.

Here was the proper combination. The girl gave promise of all her mother's Latin beauty—and it was fair to assume she inherited some of the good blood of the father.

A bargain was quickly struck, and for a comparatively small sum—but one which exceeded the mother's wildest dream of avarice—little Anita became the ward of Beattie. At once he removed her from the asylum and placed her in most competent hands. The finest schools, the most exclusive surroundings, the most expensive clothes—money without stint, music, art, travel, literature, bright companions, all were hers.

And ever was instilled into her ear that she was growing up to be the bride of the great and rich Mr. William Beattie. He made no mistake. He saw her but seldom, and always at his best. He lavished nice things upon her. He surrounded her with clever people, who sung his praises and filled her with wonder that so rare a web of fate should have been spun by the gods for any girl.

Finally after school days were over and the trip abroad had been made, she was brought to him like a ripe peach for the eating. And never had he seen so tempting a sight. His cup of happiness was overflowing.

He had been very careful that Anita had met no other men. That had been the one relentless and uncompromising rule of her educational days. Now he proposed to clinch matters before any untoward incident could occur. He had his little talk with her, and she acquiesced to his programme with a slight blush on her perfect olive cheek, but with no strong tumult in her breast. She had known all about it for years. She was not at all opposed to the programme. In fact, she liked it immensely. But there was no passion in the equation—on her part.

First and foremost there was to be a great betrothal reception, at which Anita was to be presented to society as the future Mrs. William Beattie. The wedding was to follow almost immediately. Beattie proposed to take no chances.

But fate has strange and unaccountable freaks. There drifted into that betrothal reception one Richard Lombard, a young mining engineer, only two years out of college, and those two years spent in hard work in Mexico. A great, towering, splendid fellow was Lombard, with the birth and breeding of a gentleman, and a magnetic presence—possessed of that something which attracts women everywhere. His two years of outdoor life had bronzed his skin and given him that touch of magnificent masculinity which nothing but the hand-to-hand conflict with nature can give.

The moment his blue eyes met the black orbs of Anita both knew that something was happening within them. There was opportunity for but few words, but the eyes spoke the only language worth listening to, and when late in the evening Lombard came and offered his arm "for a breath of fresh air on the veranda," she took it as a matter of course, her heart thumping so hard as to make her afraid it would be heard.

What happened on the veranda, or on the moon-lit lawn, nobody knows. Only this is known: On the following morning William Beattie found a note on his breakfast table. It read:

"Mr. Beattie: I thank you for all your kindness and your devotion, but I have a life to live as well as you. When you receive this I will be the wife of Richard Lombard and 500 miles away. I would rather be his wife for one day and live in a tent with him, than to be mistress of your mansion and your millions for a hundred years. Girls may be won, but not bought. Forgive and forget me, Anita."

SCHOOLGIRL'S DRESS

SHOULD NOT THINK TOO MUCH ABOUT THIS VEXATIOUS MATTER.

Most Schoolgirls Too Young and Too Pretty to Require Much Ornament in Their Dress—Don't Worry About Your Figure If Your Dress Is Comfortable—Health Is the Great Beautifier.

BY MARGARET E. SANGSTER.
"Jessie has reached the age when she fusses and fidgets about her dress, looks at herself in the glass, worries because her cloak or her hat or her jacket or something else, is last year's style, and altogether behaves like a vain and silly girl," exclaimed Jessie's aunt Marion, who had no patience with such frivolous conduct.

"If Jessie had been the fourth daughter in a large family," said Mary Elizabeth, looking up with a smile, "she would have learned to be thankful for small favors. Until I had passed my thirteenth birthday I never once went out of the house with a costume every bit of which had been made for me. I usually wore Susan's last year's frocks and Mildred's last year's hats, retouched and freshened up, and when I had a jacket it had been worn before me by Ethel. Mother always bought good things that would last and they lasted until several children wore them out. I was cured of fussiness before so much as a wee leaf of it cropped up in my character. Generally speaking I had new shoes and that was a comfort."

Jessie had listened to both speakers with an air of serious attention. "I love pretty things," said she, "and I hate ugly ones. Why shall sister Louise, who is a young lady, wear a corset that gives her a good figure while I who have no figure at all am obliged to wear a corded waist and button my skirts to it?"

By this time I was so stirred up that I was compelled to intrude my views on the girls.

"What on earth can you be thinking of, Jessie? A school girl's first duty to herself is to wear healthful dress and although corsets are excellent and suitable in their place for grown up young women, they are not parts of hygienic dress for you. I hope that you spend a good many hours every day out of doors, and that your director of physical culture superintends your calisthenics and your exercises in the gymnasium. The gym is as much an educational place for you as the Latin class or the recitation room where you study and present any other abstruse subject in the school. For daily use a school girl needs well-made loosely fitting blouses and skirts, and the weight of her clothing should hang not from the hips but from the shoulder.

"Deep breathing is your great necessity; your lungs should be filled daily and often with the purest air and your chest have abundant room to expand. As for shoes, you must have common sense lasts broad enough in the sole and low enough in the heel to enable you to walk with ease and grace. A school girl must not wear a tight shoe nor a high heel. You are too young and too pretty to require much ornament in your dress, and there is no sense in your fussing over shirt-waists and simple stocks, hair ribbons and belts.

"Once your wardrobe is supplied with what is comfortable and you have equipped yourself with a golf cape, a rain-coat and a sailor hat, you are ready for every occasion."

"For receptions and commencements and Sunday evenings at home?" queried Jessie, her dimples playing hide and seek as she archly glanced at me.

"I beg your pardon," I answered. "A girl does need one or two dainty frocks for evening wear and they should preferably be white. The simpler they are the more suitable they are sure to be. A great many tucks, puffs, ruffles and lace insertions are misplaced in a girl's dress while she is yet in her teens. There may be, of course, some unobtrusive decorations, but not very much is needed for she herself sets off her gown. I like to think, too, that a girl who is growing up takes a little time now and then to bestow attention on the laundress who has to wash and iron the dainty muslins that are so elaborate and so beautifully finished with lace edges and delicate embroideries.

"A girl who has once or twice done her own laundry work, washed and ironed a white muslin gown, or a duck skirt, will know by experience that it is far from easy work, and she will be somewhat more careful about frequently sending it to the tub, than her friend who has had no such personal knowledge of the labor involved."

No young girl has the slightest occasion to worry about her figure if only she has a dress that fits her comfortably, if she stands up straight throwing back her shoulders and holding up her head. The figure will take care of itself. Health is the great beautifier and sensible dress is for young people its best ally.

Fortunately for young girls, there is no question about the length of their skirts. For everyday wear frocks that reach the ankle, are comfortable and insure ease in walking, and immunity from contact with mud and dirt. For functions such as Jessie referred to in her naive question about receptions and Sunday evenings, a girl's best gown while she is in her teens may be instep length. Girls never wear trailing skirts in these days. An excellent adjunct to cleanliness, comfort and health is a whisk broom or a clothes-brush scrupulously used every time a dress is taken off. If we would carefully brush our clothes and shake them out of an open window before hanging them in closets or wardrobes, we should rid ourselves of the danger of germs that may have lurked in outside dust.

Girls should be grateful that their lot is cast in the twentieth century. An eighteenth century girl, or one born in the early nineteenth, wore a short-waisted frock with the skirt beginning under the arm-pits. It was of clinging stuff and swept the floor as she walked. Her shoes were thin slippers without heels held on by strings crossed over the instep and around the ankles. On her head she often wore a construction of muslin and wire that was half turban and half cap. Her sleeves were short and her dresses half low at the neck, as a rule. Do you not think that you are much better dressed than she was, both for health and beauty?

ADVICE ABOUT THE TEETH

Select the Brush with Care, Consult a Dentist Whenever Certain Symptoms Appear.

So many people show little discrimination in the choice of tooth brushes. It is equally wrong to have them too soft or too hard. This ought to be ascertainable by the touch, and they should not be used for any length of time, but at once discarded. Cheap brushes with which the market is now flooded are an abomination, for the hairs are sure to come out and lodge between the teeth, causing much discomfort, and, moreover, the bristles are often secured in such a way with wire that it becomes dislodged, and pricks the gums. Teeth should always be closely watched, and if the gums recede or any decay is perceived, recourse should be had at once to a dentist, for in dentistry a stitch in time does not save nine but ninety. Once let decay get any deep hold little can be done, but it is easy to arrest it at the beginning.

Parents cannot be too careful in instilling into their children early the necessity of care and attention to the teeth. It seems quite a weakness in the young to shirk tooth cleaning, and, moreover, mothers should watch the growth of the second teeth, that there is no overcrowding. In early youth many defects can be cured by proper treatment. Teeth that are growing far apart can be brought together easily; it would be a far more difficult matter later on when the gums are harder and the teeth have attained their full growth, but care should begin before the first teeth have been exchanged. It indicates something wrong if they decay, and it is a state of things that would be likely to repeat itself.

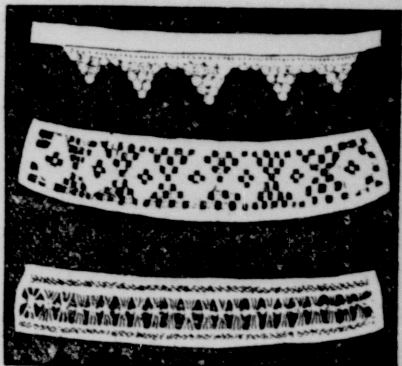

The writer remembers how as a child an old nurse who had been in the same post for two generations took infinite pains to teach her charges exactly how they should clean their teeth. She always said that pastes and liquid dentifrices were all very well in their way, but that powder should be used once a week at least, and that there was a great art in using a proper brush, which should be small and soft, and not too big for the mouth. It should be not only passed from one side to the other, but up and down, and great care taken to clean the back teeth as well as the front; finally it was essential to wash out the mouth with water, to which a few drops of fragrant dentifrice liquid should be added.

menia. It is made of the tiny thread wheels for which Armenians are so celebrated.

The second, or Hardanger, is from Sweden, and the third, or drawn-work, from Mexico. But any of them could be imitated by a skillful needlewoman.

Virginia Beauties.
In Virginia the beauties sleep upon herb pillows. They begin at this time of the year to gather the garden herbs and to dry them. They never bury the face in a feather pillow for they believe it makes wrinkles. But they sleep on herbs, powdered and softened with rose leaves and the buds of spring flowers.

For the Hands.
A few drops of cider vinegar rubbed into the hands after washing clothes will keep them smooth and take away the spongy feeling they always have after being in the water a good while.

There are now 8,000 Confederate pensioners on the rolls and announcement has been made from Austin that a warrant for $14.00 for each of them will be issued July 2.

Oklahoma is celebrating her new statehood with appropriate enthusiasm; even the merchants are busy making hay while the sun shines by pulling off "new state sales." A. N. Jenkins sends the Eagle a copy of the Shawnee News which proclaims the addition of another star to the flag in flaming headlines.

Van Zandt County is showing what can be done in the potato line. A dispatch to the News from Edgewood says that "nine cars of potatoes were billed out last night. Twenty-one cars are being loaded today. Prices were about 60 cents yesterday, but the market is very bullish this morning and promises to regain some of the loss. The quality and quantity still remain of the best."

FOR DISTRICT ATTORNEY.

The Eagle is authorized to announce Mr. J. S. Ford as a candidate for district attorney of the Twentieth judicial district, composed of the counties of Brazos, Robertson and Milam, subject to the action of the democratic primaries July 28. Mr. Ford is a native Texan, forty years old, and has made his home in Bryan all his life. He is a son of the late Judge Spencer Ford who was widely known as one of the ablest lawyers of this section of the state, and a brother of the late Pinkney S. Ford, well remembered throughout the district for his distinguished services as district attorney. Mr. Ford began the practice of law in Bryan ten years ago and was associated with his father as partner seven years prior to the latter's death. He is now a member of the firm of Henderson & Ford. He has as an attorney participated in much of the important litigation of the county for years and has met with much success in the practice of his profession. He is a good man and a substantial citizen, well known in this and the other counties of the district, and fully qualified to discharge in an able manner the important duties of the office he seeks. Mr. Ford comes before the people of the district asking their support, and pledging if elected to perform his duties faithfully, efficiently and without fear or favor. The Eagle presents his claims to the voters with pleasure.

JUDGE BELL.

Many men are of many minds, or words to that effect. Whether we would or not, all of us cannot see alike. That great "destiny that shapes our ends" so order this that the equilibrium of thought and action may be maintained, as are the stars in their courses.

And while this true, and so far as The Current Issue can see is better that it is so, nevertheless there are such cardinal virtues the attributes of some as to warrant and impel the sameness of thought and mind in the direction of one individual. Of this type of man is Judge C. K. Bell, candidate for governor of Texas.

Personal friendship, political preference and hope of reward may and doubtless will divide the people's votes, yet no one can say in his heart there is aught against this man. Learned, ripe and able, he stands high upon an imperishable pedestal upon which is wrought in lustrous letters the word—Honesty. Others may proudly prance before the public and publish all manner of promises, which may and may not be kept, but, if Judge Bell says it, it will be done.—Current Issue.

The Navasota Examiner announces the demise of the board of trade as follows: Just exactly what to think regarding the advertised meeting of the board of trade last night we are at lost to suggest. At all events, there was no one present—none but the humble secretary, and he called the roll and waited until 9:10 and departed. We suppose the organization has served its usefulness, and it is as well that its demise be announced. If in the future there seems a necessity for a business organization, one can be arranged for the occasion; then no need to longer retain a list of membership; in fact there is no membership. Being the only member present, we made a motion seconded it and put it to the house, declaring the membership null and void, and the secretary to transfer the funds remaining in the hands of the treasurer to our private account. Hence there is nothing left to squabble over.

What New England Allied Printing Trades Council Favors.

Springfield, Mass., June 15.—At the convention of the New England Allied Printing Trades council the principle of the eight-hour day was reaffirmed and resolutions were passed endorsing among the wage-earners to have the wrongs of the working people righted by independent political action and the organization of non-partisan political clubs, the principle of local option in taxation, Congressman W. R. Hearst in having the eight-hour bill reported in the house of representatives, the admission of any able-bodied immigrant and the anti-injunction bill now before congress. Other resolutions were adopted that plank 10 of the American Federation of Labor should be changed to read:

"The abolition of the monopoly system of land holding taxation of all land according to its value;" condemning high rents and low wages as causes of consumption and asserting that wages can be made high and rent low by taxing all land at its full value, thereby discouraging land speculation and encouraging land users.

BURLINGTON GUILTY.

That Railway System Is Convicted Upon All Four Counts.

Kansas City, June 14.—The Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad company was found guilty here late Wednesday afternoon by a jury in the United States district court on four counts of granting concessions on packing house shipments for exports to the Armour Packing company, Swift & Co., Cudahy & Co. and the Nelson-Morris Packing company. The conviction carries with it a fine of from $1,000 to $20,000 in each count. Judge Smith McPherson, the presiding judge, deferred sentencing the defendant until June 22.

All four counts were practically the same. The case of the Armour Packing company on which instructions were read to the jury charged specifically that the Burlington route Aug. 27, 1905, accepted a shipment of oil from Kansas City to Liverpool at a rate that included a rate of 23 cents per 100 pounds, Mississippi river to New York, whereas the regular tariff at that time was 35 cents.

TRIPLE TRAGEDY.

Infatuation of Clarence Sturgeon Causes Him to Kill Three Men.

Louisville, June 14.—W. J. Bruner, W. H. McMichael and an unknown man were shot and killed Wednesday evening by Clarence Sturgeon, a young man, at the apartments of a woman with whom Sturgeon was infatuated.

According to Sturgeon's story the three men appeared Wednesday afternoon at the home of Daisy Jackson, 431 Eleventh street. Sturgeon, who was in, denied them admittance. He claims they were boisterous, and tried to force their way in. Then threats followed, according to Sturgeon's statement, by attempts on the part of two of the intruders to draw revolvers, when he opened the door and confronted them. He immediately began firing, every one of the bullets taking effect.

"Reports of yellow fever in New Orleans absolutely false. We have no reason to conceal, and invite most rigid inspection and investigation. It is eminently unjust to confound places remote from here with New Orleans."

The telegram was called forth by reports concerning Ship Island Quarantine Station, Miss., where there are three cases of yellow fever, with the New Orleans quarantine station.

THE TROLLEY LINE

Will pass right in front of our new quarters, SECOND DOOR NORTH of "HASWELL'S BOOK STORE," where we are now prepared to amply serve the trade, and we most cordially invite our many friends and customers (as well as those who possibly have not been trading with us) to FOLLOW US and to continue to favor us with their patronage, promising to extend the same courteous treatment as in the past.

Our new quarters are more commodious and the facilities much better for serving the trade than at the old stand, and while it may be one block further for some customers to walk, it will afford them an excuse for a ride on the trolley car.

Catch the next car that passes and come to see us, and if the car seems to be late in arriving, just walk the extra block—the exercise will be good for you, anyhow.

COMMEMORATED EVENT.

Numerous Republicans Celebrate Anniversary of First Ticket.

Philadelphia, June 18.—In the same assembly room in Musical Fund hall where, June 17, 1856, the Republican party held its first national convention which named Fremont and Dayton as its ticket, hundreds of members of the party gathered Sunday to commemorate the event. Governor Pennypacker presided. Rev. E. M. Levy, a Baptist clergyman, who, fifty years ago, delivered the invocation, did likewise on this occasion. This was the beginning of the meeting of the National Republican league. Delegates from Texas, Illinois, Missouri, Illinois and Arkansas attended in a body.

The old hall, which has changed little since the first convention was held within its walls, was crowded with enthusiastic Republicans, who cheered every time the name of any of the Republican presidents was mentioned. Among those who participated were 152 men who had voted for Fremont for president. The appearance of the old men, some of whom could hardly walk, was the occasion of long and enthusiastic applause. In the ranks of the 152 was a delegate who proposed the name of Abraham Lincoln for vice president, but as the Illinois man was not well known, the nomination went to Dayton.

FORTY-SIXTH STATE.

President Roosevelt Signs the Measure With Couple of Pens.

Washington, June 18.—The statehood bill was signed by the president shortly before 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon. "Theodore" was written with a gold pen from Arizona, while "Roosevelt" was inscribed with an eagle quill from Oklahoma. All residents of Oklahoma in Washington were present. Delegate Andrews of New Mexico was also in the room. The chief executive told Mr. Andrews he hoped Arizona and New Mexico would vote for statehood. The gold pen was given to Delegate McGuire, who was congratulated for his labors in behalf of statehood. The quill will be returned to Charley Hunter, who made it from the feathers of an eagle he had killed. The president remarked to R. E. Wood of Pawnee that he would attend the commencement exercises of the University of Oklahoma in 1907, and told Delegate Andrews he would also visit Tucson next year.

REVOLUTION IS RIFE

Significant Meetings Have Been Held at St. Petersburg and Some of the Speakers Advocated Extreme Measures.

St. Petersburg, June 18.—The Constitutional Democrats seem almost ready to throw in their lot with the Revolutionist party. Popular agitation is so great that at a caucus lasting three mornings the question of changing the party's status and abandoning any further attempt to postpone an open rupture with the government was seriously debated. Roditcheff and Naboukoff, leaders of the Constitutional Democrats in the lower house, urged the absolute necessity of keeping pace with the revolutionary movement, and in insisting that unless they moved forward to battle immediately they would be overwhelmed and left stranded.
Professor Milukoff, M. Winaver and others counseled caution, saying it was not yet time to bend to the storm, but the radicals were in the majority.

The Novoe Vremya Monday says the Constitutional Democrats actually resolved to break with the government within a few days, but M. Struve, editor of the Osvobodnle, informed the Associated Press that no decision had been taken. He admitted, however, the leaders' plan was secret. Many Liberals fear a rupture and regard the contemplated move as a grave order.
They claim the Constitutional Democrats cannot hope to keep step with the Advanced Radicals, who at a meeting held in the suburbs of St. Petersburg Sunday night, not only condemned the lower house of parliament, but characterized the Constitutional Democrats as traitors. M. Aladdin was hissed because he tried to explain the absurdity of the contention that the house must demand that the emperor summon a constituent assembly. The meeting refused to listen to a statement that the government could not be asked to sign its own death warrant.
The constituent assemblies, he said, were constituted and not summoned by the government. Orators at the meeting glorified the coming dictatorship of the proletariat and cheered the cries of "down with the government and the middle classes!"

Bakeries continue closed. Strikers are threatening to wreck shops where attempts are made to bake bread. Little hardship, however, has thus far resulted. The lower classes were warned and supplied themselves with black bread in advance. The strike of the bakers is to be followed in a few days by a butchers' strike. News from the interior shows the wave of the strike is spreading.

The usual number of robberies were reported Monday, emphasizing the growing of lawlessness and anarchy in the country. There have been two murderous train robberies in the Caucasus and three stage coaches were held up in Poland.

A case of arms and 5,000 cartridges have been confiscated at Riga on an incoming steamer.

The government seems to fear a repetition of the November mutiny at Cronstadt fortress, where sailors and marines and soldiers and workmen were reported to be extremely turbulent. Two infantry regiments have been hastily dispatched to Cronstadt from Krassnoe Selo and two batteries of artillery and two machine gun batteries have been sent from Oranienbaum.
The streets of Cronstadt are filled with troops and well-to-do inhabitants are hurriedly leaving the island on which the town is situated.

DEEDS OF FARMER.

Probably Fatally Shot Sister-in-Law and Wounds a Man.

Aurora, Ind., June 18.—William Hisey, a farmer, residing near here,
probably fatally shot his sister-in-law,
Mrs. Mary Hisey, wife of a prominent Cincinnati manufacturer, and severely wounded Herbert Crall, also of Cincinnati, on his farm.

Mrs. Hisey was summoned from her summer home by a message stating that one of the children was ill and not expected to live. She hurried to the farm and is said to have been attacked at once, William Hisey and his family being all armed. Hisey, after his arrest, said he shot Mrs. Hisey in self-defense and declared she had drawn her revolver before he fired.

Herbert Crall is a son-in-law of Mrs.
Hisey. Family differences of long standing are believed to have led to the shooting.
